1. Applicant's request for reconsideration of the finality of the rejection of the last Office action is persuasive and, therefore, the finality of that action is withdrawn.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 2-9, 11, 12 and 19-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over USPN 6458724 issued to Veiga et al. further in view of USPN 6140414 issued to Ohsawa et al.

4. USPN 6140414 issued to Ohsawa et al. discloses a novel curable silicone based aqueous surface coating composition for an airbag base fabric. The coating composition comprises an emulsion of polysiloxane having a 50-95 % weight of aqueous colloidal silica dispersion containing 10-50% by weight colloidal silica particles (abstract). In applying this coating to the fabric layer a coating liquid is applied to the surface of the substrate cloth, which infiltrates the texture of the cloth and therefore coats in-between the interstices of the fabric (column 7). Ohsawa lacks the teaching of the additional silicone-coating layer.

The disclosure to Veiga et al teach a multi layered composite comprising multiple coatings and fabric layers, brought together to form a double layered either by sewing or welding (column 4) to form all three types of airbags (side curtain, driver and passenger). The fabric is constructed from synthetic materials, preferably selected from the group consisting of polyamides and polyesters, with a woven nylon being the most preferred

Art Unit: 1771

(column 2). Since the instant patent claims a woven fabric it should be understood that inherently this structure comprises a warp and a weft having interstices found there between. The coating layers can be a number of combinations such as polysiloxane/fabric/polyurethane/polysiloxane/polysiloxane (column 3). Therefore Veiga is relied upon for the teachings of a woven fabric (warp and weft) comprising polyamide or polyester yarns, with multiple coatings of silicone to form an airbag, and more specifically a side curtain air bag.

A person having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made would have found it obvious to have used the composite of Ohsawa (fabric plus siloxane coating including silica particles) in the composite of Veiga et al, who provides plural coatings in their composite. One would have been motivated by the reasoned expectation of providing an airbag with superior heat resistance as shown in Column 2 of Veiga et al.

With regard to the limitations describing the static friction, Applicant claims at least 5% which also includes the end point of zero meaning no static friction at all. However it is the position of the Examiner that applying any form of coating or filler (particle) would cause some sort of friction.
